SOCIAL MEDIA WORKSHOP

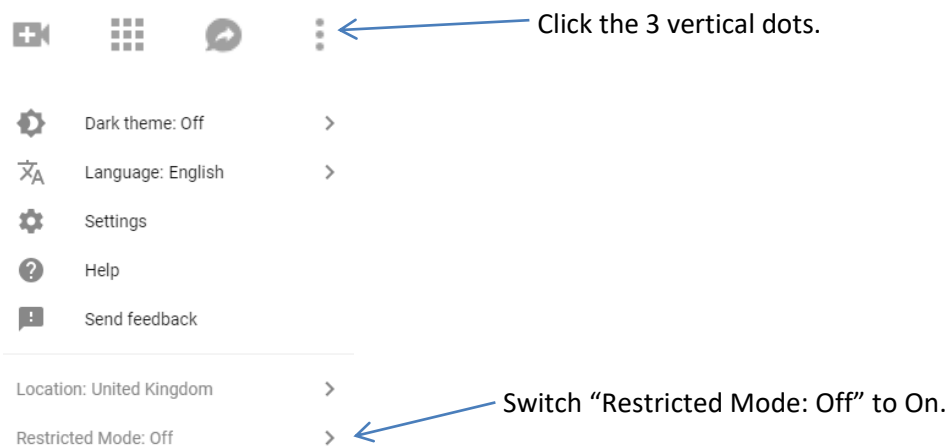

Information

- Unsuitable videos using child orientated search terms.
- They can be viewed even with YouTube's family-friendly restricted mode enabled.
- YouTube restricts users who are under 13s, however, as long as the parent is aware of the account, knows user data is being collected, and has approved the kid's account, then it is deemed as acceptable.

Tips

- Use a parental account. If you have Gmail, you automatically have a YouTube log-in. Go to YouTube, log in with your Gmail address, and go to the account settings. Pay special attention to the upload defaults (where you can make your videos private) and the comments, which you can approve before they go live or turn off altogether.
- Create a Family Link account. If you have an Android device, you can use Google's Family Link app that lets you create supervised account for kids under 13.
- Flag content if you come across anything inappropriate. Once that happens, YouTube staff can age-restrict that content, or delete it altogether.
- Bypass the YouTube app altogether, and download the YouTube Kids app. It automatically filters out content that isn't labelled as suitable for children.
- Restricting videos when you aren't signed in is straight forward:

Snapchat

Information

- Snapchat has a feature called Discover. When in the Snapchat app, you can click on Discover and see channels from content publishers with high ranking Snapchat channels. The problem is that many of these high ranking channels offer sexually oriented content.
- Although it may seem safer to have each message “disappear” Snapchats video/photos can be saved and shared however with screen capture, iOS11 Screen record feature, or by using another device to record or take a picture of the screen.
- Due to the “disappearing” messages Snapchat is very difficult for parents to supervise, you cannot easily check up on the content your child is sharing or what they are receiving, unless it is your Snapchat account your child is using, or you are always with them when they are using it.
- Snapchat allows users to connect by “adding” friends to their list. You can add people you know as well as people you don’t know. It is very easy for a child under the age of 18 to connect with older individuals, as there is no way for the application to be segmented by the age of the user.

Tips

- Snapchat also have a feature called “Snapmaps” a location map where your child, if they don’t have Snapmap switched to “Ghost Mode” can be seen by others they are connected with on Snapchat. Their location can be seen on a map.
- Snapchat introduced a “Quick Add” section. This allows friends of friends, or people in your phone contact list to easily add you to their friend list. It can open you up to random individuals you have nothing to do with attempting to add you. To turn it off, head to the Settings menu. Scroll down and select See Me in Quick Add, then uncheck the box.
- Parents can be held liable for a child’s cyber bullying if they fail to take appropriate action. In a USA bullying case led to the bully’s father being dismissed from his job for his poor reaction to interfere with his children’s actions.
- A lot of the privacy settings are much easier to access and apply through the desktop version. You can log into it by entering the following address into a web browser:

Instagram

Information

- Using a fake account is a common tool utilized by cyberbullies. On Instagram, fake accounts are used as a second account that is shared with only very close friends, or in a sinister fashion as an anonymous way to comment horrible things on certain pictures.
- With hundreds of millions of users and an endless stream of pictures categorized with hashtags, Instagram could easily be classified as an unfiltered internet search engine. Whatever you want to search for just needs # in front of it. Instagram contains a massive, unfiltered amount of extremely unsuitable material.
- There is a lot of material online that outlines the negative and positive sides to Instagram:

Negative:

Anxiety depression
Loneliness
Loss of sleep
Bullying
“Fear of missing out”

Positive:

Awareness
Emotional Support
Self-expression
Self Identify
Community Building

Tips

- Disable the location feature on photos. Make your account private. This in turn makes stories private. It also ensures that followers have to be approved before they can see content.
- If you go onto the settings and click your activity, you can see a breakdown of the usage throughout the week along with a daily average. You can then add a reminder to notify you when you have reached a desired usage limit.
- Instagram stories have their own privacy settings. You can hide your story from people and decide whether to allow people to reply to your stories. You can also apply a setting to disable sharing of your stories by one user to another user.
